Background and rationale

Mahidol University is a leading institution whose distinguished and renowned image lies in the fields of medicine, public health, science, technology, and environment. It is also perceived as a university of learning along with a leading research institution in the region. Its creative and innovative work and body of knowledge largely contributes to the betterment of society and the benefit of mankind, and is well-regarded by members of the public and worldly recognized. In addition, Mahidol University is an institution that produces graduates of undergraduate and graduate levels, aiming for them to be ready for change, technological advances, market demands in the fields that are in shortage, and societal development at a national level.

Theses and research work is a key of education at graduate level since it is a requirement in order to graduate. To deliver an effective presentation, there are steps and processes, including thesis and proposal, sample selection, data analysis, and research presentation.

Research presentation is a primary task for students at graduate level since it enables individuals to recognize and comprehend the work. In order to increase success to their work, the Faculty of Graduate Studies hosts a training program on “Delivering Presentations like a Pro” for the students to increase their knowledge about presentation techniques and methods, and be able to implement them to their work effectively.
